Grooves were originally used as a way to define rails, stiles or tongued & grooved board construction. Now, however, we are able to incorporate grooves into modern designs using new methods that allow for more creative designs. Contemporary door designs can also be created using different veneer direction on a flush door. Other interior elements such as wall partitions, wall or ceiling panels can be incorporated into contemporary home interior.

The perfect fit for modern interior is stylish MEGRAMÉ internal flush door with either solid panel with grooves or with glazed inserts. Glazed door suggests cosiness and it looks lighter. Solid or several section glass inserts made using tinted, obscure, stained, faceted or engraved glass can be used. Different veneer direction or grooves instead of glass inserts will add some charm. You can add an additional touch of glamour by choosing wall and ceiling panels that repeat the design of the doors.
